

MCP Token Audit

Five days, fixed price. One agreed workflow where AI agents or MCP tools reach regulated data.

THE QUESTION IT ANSWERS

When an AI agent acts inside your systems, which identity is it acting as, what can it actually reach, and could you prove afterwards what it did? Agents usually get working access first and scoped access later. This audit tells you, for one real workflow, how far apart those two are and what to fix first.

WHAT YOU GET

- Permissions map: every identity, token and scope the agreed workflow uses, and what each can reach against what the task needs.
- Documented risks: each gap in plain language, rated by likelihood and impact, with the evidence behind it.
- Prioritized remediation plan: specific RBAC and audit-trail changes, ordered so the first few close the largest exposure.
- Readout call: we walk through the findings with your team and agree the order of fixes.

WHAT WE NEED FROM YOU

- One engineer who knows the workflow, for the kickoff and readout calls plus short questions in between.
- Read access to configuration: MCP server and client config, token and role definitions, relevant logs. A screen-share walkthrough works where direct access is not appropriate.
- Architecture docs, if they exist. None required.

FIVE DAYS

Day 1	Kickoff call. Agree the workflow, the systems in scope and the access we need.
Days 2–3	Map identities, tokens and scopes; trace what the workflow can reach and what gets logged.
Day 4	Write up risks and the remediation plan.
Day 5	Readout call and delivery of the written report.

The clock starts once the agreed access and documentation are available.

HOW YOUR DATA IS HANDLED

- We review configuration, permissions and logs, not your customers' records. No production data is copied out.
- Findings stay with you. An NDA is fine; send yours or we will send one.

OUT OF SCOPE

- Implementing the fixes. That is a separate conversation after the readout.
- Penetration testing, a compliance certification, or any guarantee of regulatory outcome.
- Workflows beyond the one agreed.
